

Local Businesses Around The Country Rely On Open Skies

"Open Skies agreements have increased the number of flights to all regions of the United States, expanding options to mid-markets such as our destination, and providing travelers with lower fares. It is great not only for travelers but for the tourism industry as a whole."

—Great Lakes Bay Regional Convention & Visitors Bureau, Saginaw, MI

"If we want tourists to take note of Miami in the same way they consider New York, Chicago, or Los Angeles, it is important that we provide direct international flights."

—Thrower Mobility Transportation Services, Miami, FL

"We receive about twenty percent of our business from foreign business and leisure travelers. We get a lot of business particularly from Europe, such as the UK, Germany, France and even occasional guests from Asia, such as China and Singapore. It is a huge benefit to airports like San Francisco International to have direct flights to and from international locations."

—Black Heron Inn, Point Reyes Station, CA
